She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hocker, one of Ohio County's pioneer families. In early life, near the age of 15, she professed faith in Christ united with the M. E. Church and lived a consistent member thereof during the remainder of her life, 70 years.

CABINET CONSIDERS IMMIGRATION PHASES

Harding To Include Subject In Message To Congress.

Washington, Dec. 5.—The whole problem of immigration was discussed at length today by President Harding and his cabinet and it was indicated afterward that this would be one of the subjects with which the executive would deal in his forthcoming annual message to Congress.

While it was stated at the White House that there had been no decision as to policy at the cabinet meeting, some administration officers were under the impression that Mr. Harding would propose a continuation of the present restriction law with certain amendments sponsored by Secretary Davis and designed to raise the general standard of emigrants embarking for the United States.

The labor secretary, it was said authoritatively, is opposed to any increase of the existing 3 per cent limitation, at least until the tide of immigration from Northern and Western Europe reaches the quota allowed by law. Thus far the number of immigrants coming from those sections have equaled only about 50 per cent of the authorized maximums. On the other hand, officials pointed out, the inflow from Southern Europe has reached the permitted maximum each year, with many thousands of others in that section seeking to come to this country.

Problem Is Perplexing.

Amendments to the present law which Mr. Davis is having prepared would provide for an examination at debarkation ports of all emigrant aliens with particular reference to character and to physical and mental conditions. There also would be a blood test. The examinations would be conducted by public health and immigration bureau officers stationed abroad, and would entail some enlargement of the overseas forces of both those services.

The immigration problem, as explained today, presents many perplexing phases and any solution of it might have its effect on general economic conditions over the country. It was stated that unless a shortage of common labor could be relieved thru immigration, there would be a tendency toward higher wages for this character of help with attendant increases in prices and also the inducement for farm hands to flock to the industrial centers. On the other hand, attention was called that a letting down of the immigration bars might produce an over-abundance of labor, with resultant unemployment, a lowering of purchasing power and an economic depression of more or less general character.

Shortage of Labor.

There is a present shortage of common labor and a White House spokesman disclosed that because of this there had come a pressure from industry generally for an increase in immigration. It was added, however, that there was an equal pressure against such a policy.

The situation with which the administration is undertaking to deal at this time is quite apart from the proposals that refugees from the Near East be permitted to enter the United States in excess of the quotas for the countries from which they come. There was no expression of opinion from the executive department as to this, but two resolutions to waive the restriction law as to the refugees were introduced in the Senate, one by Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, and the other by Senator Keyes, Republican, New Hampshire.

WATTS AGAIN SUED BY POOLING BODY

Association Asks $7,500.00 Damages From Fayette Grower.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 5.—Garrett Watts, wealthy Fayette County tobacco grower, for the second time was made defendant today in a suit filed by the Burley Tobacco Growers' Co-operative Association for damages for breach of contract for selling on loose leaf warehouse floors tobacco pledged for delivery to the association in a contract signed by him last fall when the Burley co-operative was organized. The sum of $7,500 damages is asked in the second suit, with $1,000 for expenses incurred in suing him.

The petition filed in the Fayette Circuit Court today carries the names of Franklin, Talbott & Chapman, of Lexington; Worthington, Browning & Reed, of Maysville; C. Hallmeyer, of Lexington, and Aaron Sapiro, of San Francisco, as counsel, and alleges that Mr. Watts has sold over the loose leaf floors 150,000 pounds of tobacco raised on his property and which, under the provisions of the Bingham co-operative marketing act, he is "conclusively presumed" to be able to control.

The history of the organization of the association is gone into fully in the petition, which shows that the contract signed by Watts is one of many thousands of such contracts and in which it is provided that if the contract be violated the sum of 5 cents a pound can be collected from the violator as liquidated damages.

In November judgment was given against Watts by Judge J. C. Dedman, in the Bourbon Circuit Court, for $325 damages and costs in the first case filed against him by the association. The suit against him today is the first of probably half a dozen now being prepared or ready to file against contract breakers who have delivered tobacco in the names of others than themselves to the loose leaf houses.

FARM DWELLING IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

The dwelling house of Mrs. Wayne N. Stevens, two miles north of town, was wholly consumed by fire about 6:30 o'clock Wednesday evening. The blaze, starting from the roof, thought to have been caused from burning soot, enabled the neighbors to save some of the contents of the upper rooms and quite a lot, or perhaps the larger portion of the contents of the lower part of the building.

The dwelling was a two story building, comparatively new and one of the best farm homes on the North side of the river. Mrs. Stevens did not know of the fire until called over the phone by a neighbor, and such headway had been attained as to make saving of the building utterly impossible.

The property was partially insured, so we are informed.

REV. WALKER RECALLED BY HARTFORD CHURCH

Rev. Russell Walker, for five years pastor of the Hartford Baptist Church, was recalled, or re-elected as pastor for another year in a meeting of the congregation held Wednesday night. Being tendered the pastorate of the local Baptist Church for the sixth consecutive year, is within itself, a flattering compliment to Rev. Walker and if the Pastor accepts the bid to remain, the congregation and community are in line for congratulations.

MRS. CLARA PHILLIPS ESCAPES FROM JAIL

Sentenced For Murder, Woman Saws Way To Freedom.

Los Angeles, Dec. 5.—Armour L. Phillips, whose wife, Clara Phillips, convicted muddress, escaped from the Los Angeles county jail last night, appeared at the office of her attorney late today and sent word to the sheriff's office he was ready to be interviewed about the escape.

Phillips later made a statement in which he said he knew nothing about the escape or where his wife had gone. He gave a detailed account of his movements for the past twenty-four hours.

Mrs. Clara Phillips was under sentence to serve from ten years to life in the state penitentiary for the murder of Mrs. Albert Meadows. Her escape was so well planned and executed that it remained unknown for more than six hours.

Bars Sawed Out.

Three steel bars guarding the window in her cell were sawed through from the inside. Then a square of heavy mesh netting was cut out, and thru the opening thus formed the woman made her way out and over adjacent roofs of other parts of the jail, down thru a trap door and out to where liberty and an automobile awaited her.

The sheriff dispatched deputies to all ports along the western portion of the northern boundary of Mexico. He also had all depots and the main roads out of Southern California guarded, telegraphed descriptions of the woman and her husband to nearby peace officers and personally led a search of those places to which it was believed the woman might have fled.

Investigation at the jail indicated that at least three persons had aided the woman. Her quarters were on the third floor of the old jail building and she occupied a tank cell overlooking a roof of an auxiliary structure, a story lower. Footprints and other marks on this roof led the deputies who investigated that angle of the escape to announce their belief that at least two persons aided her on the roof and that one or two more awaited them in an automobile at the street level. The Los Angeles county jail stands in the main business section of the city. It is within a block of the federal building where postal activities are continuous. Street cars pass along one side and even in the quiet hours of the night vehicle traffic is quite heavy. There are always jailers and matrons on duty and a glare of street lamps surrounds it.

Discovery Delayed.

The sheriff announced that a number of persons who were connected with the trial of Mrs. Phillips would be sought to throw what light they could on the escape.

The matron on duty at the time of the escape was Mrs. L. D. Fisher, long a member of the jail staff. She said she visited Mrs. Phillips in her cell at about 9:30 last night, and found her in bed and complaining of illness. Mrs. Fisher said she returned to the matron's quarters about twenty-five feet from the door of Mrs. Phillips' cell. She said during the night she heard nothing unusual.

Mrs. Fisher said she knocked on all the cell doors at 6:30 this morning and then awoke the women in the dormitory. Women assigned to cells have their breakfast in their cells. Mrs. Phillips' breakfast was put in a shelf in her door as usual. Later the cells were unlocked and when Mrs. Fisher noticed that Mrs. Phillips had not appeared she asked other prisoners concerning her and they said she was "around some place." Still unable to locate her, the matron resumed her routine work and then, she said, a woman who occupied a cell adjoining that of Mrs. Phillips told her that Mrs. Phillips had escaped.

Cells in the women's ward have inside curtains. Curtains to Mrs. Phillips' cell were down and this delayed discovery of the escape.

WASHINGTON COMMENT

The Ku Klux Klan is avowedly a Protestant organization. As such it is anathema to the Catholic Church. Because of the regalia worn by the Klan, it is perfectly possible for men who are not Klansmen, to wear a similar regalia, and thus thrust upon the Klan the blame for unlawful acts done by hooded men.

Without full and complete evidence it is not possible intelligently to discuss the claim made that the Klan has interfered with or "dominated" the sovereign State of Louisiana. No such evidence is being presented. Various unlawful acts have at times been done by hooded men. Opponents of the Klan charge that all such acts are done by Ku Klux Klansmen. The Klan denies that such acts are done by authority and consent of the order.

Defenders of the Klan say that it is no more reasonable to say that all crimes committed by men who wear a white hood and mask are committed by Klansmen, than it is to charge that all thefts committed by masked burglars are the work of society gentlemen who wear masks at a masked ball.

There is much discussion, pro and con, going on in Congress regarding the charges and the countercharges about the Klan. The wise heads in Congress holding the radical element in check, agree that if the Klan does that which is un-American and unlawful, the Klan should, and will, be punished. But until it is proved that un-American and unlawful acts done in the regalia of the Klan are, in fact, done by the Klan, the Klan deserves the same treatment accorded any accused under our system of jurisprudence; it is innocent until proved guilty. All the thunderings of Jesuitical mouthings, all the priestly protests, and all the intolerant fanaticism of the Church which is its enemy, can not make it otherwise. It is evidence, not opinion, which must indict, and a court of law, not priestly excommunication, which must convict.

The incalculable good which must result to the cause of education thru the holding of Education Week, December 3 to 9, inclusive, can not be summed up in a page, let alone a paragraph. But if it accomplishes nothing more than the focusing of public attention upon the inadequate teaching staffs of our public schools it will have more than served its purpose.

The staffs are inadequate for one, and only one reason; the inability of those in authority to see with sufficient breadth of vision that teaching is highly skilled, specialized work requiring the highest type of manhood and womanhood, and deserving an adequate wage. Because teachers' salaries are universally so low, those who stick to that noble profession do so from love of it, from love of its ideals, from a sense of duty, and the religion of service. Because teachers' salaries are universally so low, the youth of our land is not attracted to the normal school and teacher's college; young men desire to enter occupations which assure them of comfort, and a reasonable luxury; young women, more and more taking their places in the economic structure of our country, are preparing themselves for other vocations where the rewards are commensurate with the preparation, the effort, the education, and the ability required.

The State depends now upon its citizens of legal age and over. In ten years it will be depending upon the children of today. If these children are not well taught, properly taught, highly taught, the future citizens of America will be ignorant, unable to think, to plan, to carry on this, our Nation, in its forward course. If the child of to-day is the voter, and perhaps, the Legislator and the President of to-morrow, then the teacher of to-day is the maker of the Nation of tomorrow. The best of teachers, paid well enough to enable them to give their best to our children, should be none too good for America; if Education Week can awaken the electorate to the need of the best, the need of paying for the best, it will not be held in vain.

MODERN FRENCH REALISM

The Paris Figaro quotes some fearful and wonderful examples of blunders made by French novelists. One of these authors, after killing off a villain in one chapter, forgot all about it and had him go on talking and doing things as if nothing had happened. Another one, in describing the heroine says: "Her hands were cold, like that of a serpent." A third tells us: "The colonel paced back and forth with his hands behind his back, reading a paper." Here is another sample of queer "local color": "At this sight the negro's face grew dreadfully pale." One writer, in speaking of the villain, writes: "Ha, ha," he exclaimed in Portuguese. A popular novelist, describing one of his characters, declares: "The man was dressed in a velvet jacket and in pants of the same color."

Should Be Quarantined

Many physicians believe that anyone who has a bad cold should be completely isolated to prevent other members of the family and associates from contracting the disease, as colds are about as catching as measles. One thing sure—the sooner one rids himself of a cold the less the danger and you will look a good while before you find a better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to aid you in curing a cold.

ANSWER THESE IF YOU CAN

Did you ever see: A board walk? A stone step? A cow slip? A peanut stand? A sardine box? A house fly? A bed spring? A clock run? An ink stand? A morning break? A night fall? A mill run? Or answer these: Do ships have eyes when they go out to sea? Are there springs in the ocean's bed? Does the river ever lose its head? Is a newspaper white when it's read? When you eat a square meal do the corners hurt? Is a baker broke when he is making dough?

HIS DAY

(Marguerite Burrill.)

He was a gutter-dog. Hopelessly and inevitably a gutter-dog. His great brown eyes looked out upon the world, and dreading it, still held a great hope in their luminous depths. Sometime, perhaps, there would come his day. Our gutter-dog slept at night in the filthy rubbish heaps of narrow alleyways. Cringing from the morning light and the host of enemies it brought, he sought scraps to eat in fly-infested, garbage cans. Shooed, kicked, stoned, cursed at throat the day, he again slunk into the alleyway at night, tucked his tired head between his bruised thin forepaws, and slept. Came there a day when hunger drove him out into the surge and roar of city streets. Seeking the gutter, he slunk along, head down, tail abjectly drooping. Somewhere up the street there came the shriek of an auto horn in raucous warning—a woman's scream—"My baby!" Out of the gutter a spectre of a dog has leaped, stiffened momentarily, become dynamic with action—has become chief character in the grim street-tragedy.

Following the event, the calmness of triumph over death—relief—the swift current of life resumed—surging, flowing, onward—a purposeful stream. A woman knelt beside a bleeding dog stroking the broken body of the dying hero with compassionate hands, soft words of pity on her lips. The little rescued girl stood by, ashy-faced, tearful, gazing also at her rescuer. But there was little need of tears. Our gutter dog was happy at last. His great brown eyes looked out upon the world, dreading it no longer, holding in their luminous depths the fulfillment of a great hope. His day had come, at last. What if there was no tomorrow, still there was for him today, this hour of blissful happiness. What more could a gutter-dog expect?—Our Dumb Animals.

Do You Enjoy Your Meals?

If you do not enjoy your meals your digestion is faulty. Eat moderately, especially of meats, masticate your food thoroughly. Let five hours elapse between meals and take one of Chamberlain's Tablets immediately after supper and you will soon find your meals to be a real pleasure.

"Ah! my poor man, I suppose poverty brought you to this?"

"On the contrary, I was simply coming money!"—London Passing Show.

Her girl Chum—Did the minister make George use the words, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow?"

Mrs. Gillingham—No. Why put him on his guard? I'll get 'em anyway.

THE RIGHT SETTING

By MOLLIE MATHER

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union.

The elder sister of Janey bewailed her indifference before the family. "She is such a dear sweet soul," said Marion, "that it seems a pity some fine man may not be allowed to appreciate her lovable qualities. Janey shuts up like a gray oyster in masculine presence, withdrawing her charms in the shell. She is provokingly perverse. At dances she will sit meekly bored, while social functions, as a rule, are a weariness to her. But give Janey some good music to play, or a new book to discuss, and she will blossom out in surprising cleverness and feeling. I wonder how she ever got into our light-headed family."

"Janey loves us all," young Mollie said loyally, "but she is different—superior I would call it, like Professor Craythorne. Everyone is wild to have Professor Craythorne at entertainments or banquets, because he is brilliantly interesting."

The married sister sighed. "Well, I'd like to know Janey's proper setting," she said, "and place her in it. She's too pretty a flower to 'waste her sweetness on the desert air.'"

"I," remarked Corrine, "am satisfied to let Janey rest in her oblivion. If it were not for our demure sister's indifference to the average man, I would have no admirers at all. They usually see and come, but it is Janey's affections that they would conquer. And Janey is too busy with her writings and her studies to pay attention to them, so they return humbly grateful to my society. Do you know?"

Corrine sat up laughing. "I am determined to vanquish that new admired professor. His coldness piques me, and he is so good-looking."

Mollie smiled scornfully. "You have got some job before you, Cleopatra." She mocked. "Every girl in college has a crush on Professor Craythorne—to say nothing of many outside. But does he notice them? Nix," ended Mollie expressively.

"You are growing," Corrine remarked, "colder and more impossible every day. I hope that your mode of slangy conversation is confined to your home."

Marion leaned forward eagerly. "While you two have been quarreling," she said, "I've had an idea. From Mollie's description of the professor it would seem that he and Janey are true congenial souls, and if I could bring about a match between them it would be highly commendable. I intend to try. Nothing could be more natural than that Ned should invite his old friend in to dinner some evening."

Marion put on her hat, preparatory to returning to her own home. "Settled," she said happily.

But though her ambitious plans were easy of attainment, the evening was a failure, at least as far as drawing Janey and the professor together was concerned. Janey, after fulfilling her duties as hostess-assistant, retired upon the entrance of Ned and his friend to the living room into a far corner with a book, while the professor, after several uneasy glances at his watch, murmured something about "an unexpected engagement," and made his adieux. Marion had no sympathy in her discouragement.

"Match-making matrons," remarked Corrine bitterly, "are odious. No wonder the professor fights shy of them."

But Mollie laughed. "The wrong setting," she mischievously explained.

Corrine, a few evenings later, was merrily triumphant, when she returned from an entertainment, with the professor as escort.

"She gets 'em all," said Mollie indignantly. "Marion's disappointment was visible. Corrine's arrogant pride in her own popularity jarred upon her. The elder sister's heart yearned over the small unselfish Janey, absorbed in ambitious study, yet forgetful often of self in thought for others. Indifferent appearing in her aloofness, Janey had a heart of gold, and John Craythorne possessed a man's noble qualities. Surely there was a match which should be 'made in Heaven.'"

Janey was quiet when she came into dinner at evening. She relieved the protesting Mollie as usual of her tasks, and later, shining-eyed, slipped away to her own room.

"In anticipation of reading a new story," Corrine explained.

But it was Mollie who, entering the house some few days after, gave the true key to the situation. "Marion, Corrine," she began excitedly, "you should have seen them, Janey and our professor, sitting there, one upon either side of a reading table in the library. I had to go down for a book and I watched them secretly for some time. They were talking together in whispers and laughing softly. But it was the way they looked into each other's eyes; you could see they had discovered Marion's kindred spirit idea. It's been going on for some time. Janey confessed that they met some time ago, by accident, at that same library table. We will lose Janey soon," Mollie concluded shrewdly. "It was the right setting."

The Main Trouble.

"You should have all your clerks take our course in scientific salesmanship."

"But—"

"We show them how to seize the psychological moment for closing a sale."

"The main trouble now is that we can't get clerks."

HARTFORD, KY.

Illinois Central System Urges More Intensive Use of Limited Railway Facilities

The great shortage of railway transportation continues, and many shippers are suffering losses by reason of it. The remedy for the more distant future lies in greatly enlarging and expanding railway facilities of all kinds. There is no completely effective remedy for the immediate future, but there is an opportunity for improvement through more intensive use of our present limited facilities—by loading and unloading cars more promptly and by loading cars more heavily.

In many instances cars are unloaded or loaded the same day they are delivered. That kind of co-operation helps the situation materially, but it occurs all too frequently that a car which could be completely loaded or unloaded in a day is held over into the following day. This should be avoided wherever possible. Freight cars still spend more than one-third of their time in the hands of shippers and consignees. We believe this delay can be reduced substantially if shippers will give this question the serious attention which it deserves, and we urge them to do so.

We are putting forth our best efforts to load more heavily the cars that we load ourselves, and we urge our patrons to join us in these efforts to provide more transportation. We realize that there are some commodities which cannot be loaded to the full carrying capacity of the cars. However, shippers on the Illinois Central System are utilizing only three-fourths of the full capacity of freight cars (except coal cars) which transport commodities permitting of capacity loading. That means one-fourth of the capacity of such cars is being wasted. We urge our patrons to assist us in correcting this condition as far as it lies within their power to do so.

We give below concrete cases to illustrate how transportation opportunities are being wasted. In October, lumber loading on Illinois Central System Lines was only 58.3 per cent of the capacity of the cars loaded, mixed feed loading was only 54.9 per cent, cement loading was only 76 per cent, cotton-seed products loading was only 56.2 per cent, flour and meal loading was only 59 per cent, sugar loading was only 62.2 per cent, and stucco and plaster loading was only 75.3 per cent of maximum car capacity. The cars which transported these commodities and many other commodities should have been loaded fully 25 per cent more heavily than they were.

Coal car loading was more than 95 per cent of maximum capacity; wheat and corn loading was more than 90 per cent, and stone, sand and gravel loading was nearly 96 per cent of the capacity of the cars.

One way of measuring the efficiency of a railway organization is through its record on the average number of miles made per car per day; this average includes all freight cars on the railroad—cars standing awaiting loading or unloading, cars out of repair, cars being switched in yards and cars moving in trains. The best record ever attained on the Illinois Central System on miles per car per day prior to this year was made in October 1920, when the record of 44.59 miles per car per day was established. That record was surpassed in October 1922, with a record of 45.75 miles per car per day.

Co-operation received from our shipper patrons assisted us materially in attaining these results. In urging further and more intensive co-operation of shippers, we are not unmindful of the assistance which they have already rendered; but we believe that the present transportation crisis justifies every shipper and railway man in going to the extreme limit of his ability in getting every possible service out of our limited transportation facilities.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

C. H. MARKHAM,
President, Illinois Central System.

DREAM SAVES TENANTS

When Mrs. Jessie Barotti, who lived in a New York tenement house, dreamed of flames leaping thru the building and muffled footsteps creaking thru the hallways, she awoke and screamed. "The house is afire." Her husband got up to investigate and discovered a fire in the hallway. All 60 tenants in the building escaped without injury.

PRACTICAL POINTERS

Before attempting to polish dark wood furniture, carefully wash article with vinegar and water mixed together in equal proportions to remove all traces of dirt; then apply polish.

Attractive designs may be made quickly and easily in pie covers and other pastry crusts by folding and cutting with clean scissors.

The polish on gunstocks and wooden handles of tools soon wears off. If you want a lasting polish, soak the wood in linseed oil for about a week, then rub the surface with an oil-soaked cloth a short time each day for a week or so. It is especially worth while to do this on a gunstock.

Pat patch pockets on your aprons under the edge, on the wrong side. They will be just as handy and will not catch on things.

An egg which has been accidentally cracked may be preserved by pasting over the opening a strip of paper wet with some of the white of the egg. To keep yolks of eggs from drying keep covered with cold water until ready to use.

Splendid Cough Medicine.

"As I feel that every family should know what a splendid medicine Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is, I am only too pleased to relate my experience and only wish that I had known of its merits years ago," writes Mrs. Clay Fry, Ferguson Station, Mo. "I give it to my children when they show the slightest symptoms of being croupy, and when I have a cough or cold on the lungs a very few doses will relieve me, and by taking it for a few days I soon get rid of the cold."

CONGRESSWOMAN RESENTS DEFEAT

Miss Alice Robertson, who was just defeated by a large majority by the man whom she unseated in 1920, does not take her defeat kindly. "I have been insulted by the citizenship of the city for which I long have fought and made sacrifices," she declared. Feeling that she has nothing to return for she announced that when her congressional term expires she will go back to Muskogee, Okla., her home town, just to get her summer clothes. Her old farm bordering Muskogee, the last bit of property she owns, may be sold. When asked whether she would accept a position in the women's bureau of the department of labor, if it were offered her, she replied: "I've got to do something, haven't I, and I haven't a cent of income after I leave congress."

PLEADS FOR PLAY SPIRIT

Prof. John F. Smith, of Berea college, Ky., believes that hostility to the play spirit is alienating young people from the rural church and creating opposition to many of our most sacred institutions. "People of the open country need instruction in the art of providing abundant, wholesome recreation," he said.

WHISKY STOLEN THROUGH TUNNEL

During the last few months more than 25,000 gallons of whisky was stolen from a brewery warehouse at Peoria, Ill., via a tunnel passing under the roadway. The tunnel was equipped with a cord signal system and a tube through which the whisky was siphoned.

INFANT LEADS ORCHESTRA

An orchestra composed of 21 children of four and five years is boasted by the Garrison kindergarten school, of Concord, N. H., as the largest kindergarten orchestra in the world. The instruments used include drums, clappers, bells, bird whistle, xylophones, triangle, horse-shoes, dumb bells, tambourines, cymbals, kazoo and castanets.

PER CAPITA CURRENCY INCREASED

The treasury department states that the per capita circulation of currency in the United States increased 40 cents during the month of October. On October 1 there was $4,520,895,293 in circulation as compared with $4,570,280,827 one month later, when the per capita circulation was $41.44.

PARALYZED BY SCREWDRIVER

As Mrs. Ella Coleman, of New York, passed along the street she was knocked down by a half-pound screwdriver which fell from a 19th story window. The point penetrated her head two inches and immediately paralyzed her left leg.

"I think Jack's real mean."

"Why?"

"He wrote Gladys from Florida he shot an alligator six feet long and if he was lucky enough to get another he'd have a pair of slippers made for her."

DIDN'T FOOL THE CONDUCTOR

Train Official Seldom Deceived by Travelers Who Imagined They Appeared Used to Luxuries.

The woman had never been in a compartment on a train before. She must confess this bit of luxurious ignorance. She was seated comfortably, reading and looking out of the window alternately, and greatly enjoying the privacy when she heard a buzzing sound. Again and again it sounded. Doubtless the people in the next compartment ringing for the porter.

And then came a knock at the door. "I hope I didn't disturb you," the conductor said as he asked for the woman's ticket.

"Oh, no, I was just sitting here reading and admiring the scenery."

"Oh," the conductor said, "I wonder if the bell doesn't ring."

"The bell?" Then the woman understood that that had been the buzzing she had heard.

"I'm afraid I'm very ignorant," she admitted. "I've never been in a compartment before, and I didn't know you rang to come in."

But the conductor was not horrified at the smallness of her knowledge.

"I'm glad to hear you admit it, lady," he said. "There's lots who have never been in a compartment, but they wouldn't admit it for worlds. We know when they're not used to 'em. They can't fool us, but you're the first I've met who hasn't foolish pride."—Chicago Journal.

PROSAIC REASON FOR SERVICE

Could It Be Possible the Preacher Was Giving the Deacon a Delicate Hint?

The Midville church had a new preacher, and Deacon Sturgeon was entertaining him at Sunday dinner. At least that was the way the Weekly Blade would report the occasion, but, as a matter of fact, the deacon was feeding the preacher at Sunday dinner, while as for entertainment, the preacher was entertaining the deacon.

"And so you saw service in the great European war?" the deacon asked.

"Yes, I served nearly two years as chaplain," the preacher replied.

"Get across?"

"Oh, yes. I was in France nearly a year."

"Well, I don't believe in war," the deacon declared. "But I suppose you heard the call of duty and couldn't hold back."

"Well, I can't say that was it altogether," the preacher answered. "There were several other things to be considered."

"For instance?" demanded the deacon, who did not shy at questioning.

"Well," and the preacher smiled quietly, "I went into the army for one thing, because I got my pay regularly!"

Mary Anderson Lauds Booth.

A portrait of Edwin Booth, by many considered America's greatest tragedian, was presented lately to the Memorial Art gallery in the Shakespeare memorial at Stratford-on-Avon by an American friend of the drama and his colleagues.

The most striking feature of the ceremony was the voice of Mme. de Navarro, once the idol of American dramatic audiences as Mary Anderson, says the New York Sun. Her personal reminiscences of Edwin Booth reached their climax in her recitation of an apostrophe in verse to the great actor.

A voice from out the past, indeed, and its magical effect upon the audience gathered at Stratford is ample testimony to the truth that the great backgrounds in art and human life are not blotted out by the intense preoccupation in things of the present which seem to fill the picture.

New Motion Picture Idea.

A motion picture projector which can be used by anybody, anywhere, making possible the projection of moving pictures under all conditions, is in use in France. The lantern and film reels of the projector are supported above an upright triangular frame, at right angles to which is a second triangular frame supporting a seat and a large pulley driven by pedals. Behind the large pulley is a dynamo which supplies current for a high-powered incandescent lamp. By means of belts the pedaled pulley operates the dynamo, the projector and the film reels all simultaneously.—Popular Science Magazine.

His Viewpoint.

"Father!"
The weeping girl pleaded piteously.

"Father! Why don't you let me marry George, and take him into the firm? Why, O why?"

The business man raised her head tenderly.

"I feel for you, darling," he said. "I do need George in my business—I could use him, and will, if he says the word, but daughter, I think I can hire him cheaper than I can support him."

And with a gesture of pitiless finality, he dropped the subject.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

"Shocking."

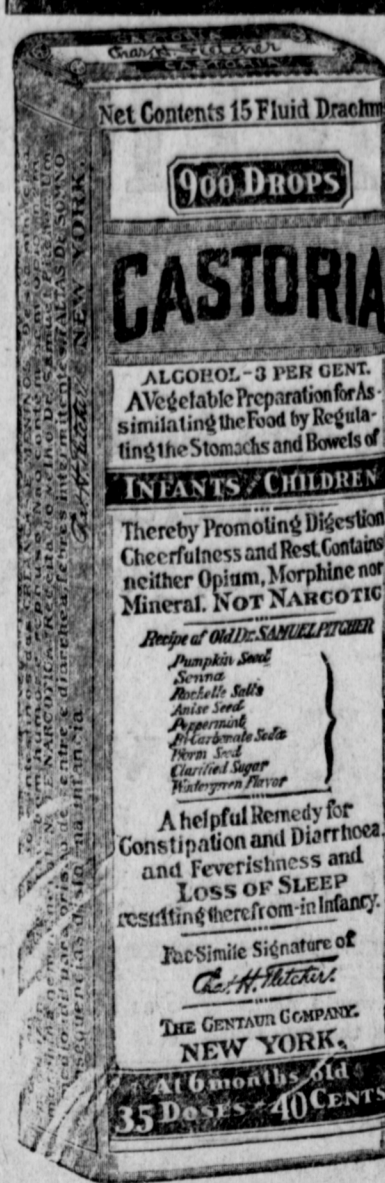

"Waiter! Waiter!" shouted a young fellow, who for the last half hour had been wrestling with a steak, but failed to get his knife through it.

"Yes, sir!" said the waiter, coming forward.

"How do you cook your food in this place?" asked the young man.

"Well, sir, all our food is cooked by electricity," answered the waiter.

"Then—here," said the young man, "take this back and give it another 'shock.'"

BRITAIN SUES U. S.

Great Britain is suing the United States for $3,000,000 which she claims the state of New York owes the Cayuga Indians, many of whom now live in Canada. In 1808 these Indians ceded their territories to New York on condition that the state pay the tribe and their heirs in perpetuity $2400 annually. When the Cayugas joined the British in the war of 1812 New York ceased to make the payments. Under the peace treaty which provided that none of her allies should lose any of their rights Great Britain on behalf of the Indians now demands payment of arrears with compound interest besides continuation of the annual payments in the future.

FRIDAY..... DECEMBER 8

Congress was out of session just ten minutes Monday, only that space elapsing 'twixt the end of the special session and the beginning of the new. The clock in the front office did not stop in the interim.

In so far as England is concerned, and taking all of the circumstances into consideration, both inside and out, so far as she could reasonably be expected to go, Ireland has been given all the privileges of a free state. Has been placed upon the same plane, approximately, as Canada, our free-going and contented neighbor to the north of us. If the Irish could and would manage to exercise the intelligence for which the world gives them credit with possessing, the Emerald Isle should begin to blossom with contentment and prosperity in the near future, to such an extent not heretofore experienced. The British Legislative powers, now composed of that element generally designated as conservative, and the class who have always fought giving Ireland any sort of freedom or form of homerule finally and without a dissenting voice, voted for ratification of the bill and pact establishing the Irish Free State. It's up to the Irish, so to speak, to do the balance.

After the elapse of more than six years from the date of the sinking of the Lusitania by the Germans, due to the fact, as claimed by German Authorities, that the giant steamer was armed and naturally hostile to German interest, official information has been given to the citizens of America that the liner carried no arms, either of defense or offense.
Why the exact status of the Ger-man's base for the charge should have been buried in official archives so long is rather hard to understand.
Our Government Authorities, or certain departments knew that the ship was unarmed, but as we recall matters at this date, we do not believe that the Country was officially apprised of the facts, at least to the extent of giving out report of the Collector of Customs of the port from which the doomed ship and the more than 1,100 persons sailed.
There were reasons we presume, for failure to make the report public.

They would probably be as interesting as the report itself.

ber on the evening's program.

BEADS ODDLY STRUNG

(By J. D. Claire)

If the fire that destroyed the Beaver Dam depot was not incendiary origin it easily might have been.
There was certainly motive enough on the part of the traveling public that had to use the miserable makeshift.

The cost of dying has been radically reduced in this city; one undertaking establishment advertising to furnish everything essential to a funeral except the corps for sixty-seven dollars. If you want to save expenses come to Louisville to die.

I can't imagine why Fluke is trying to inveigle his wife into sparing him a half dozen eggs on the occasion of my expected Christmas visit.
He knows I do not eat eggs.

I notice by The Republican where a prosperous Fordsville farmer has been arrested for moonshining. There is no doubt about his being prosperous if he had been operating the still very long.

Buddy McPheg says that prohibition is more satisfactory to the public than the license system. He says the old law made the saloons close on Sundays and election days, but the soft drink stands are open every day in the year.

The jury in the Stamp trial satisfied nobody. It gave him fifteen years, when some of the folks wanted him electrocuted and while some wanted him acquitted.

Fluke, if you don't like the prices of your local butchers bring your basket and come up. We will sell you the best round steak for seventeen cents and nice lean pork chops for a quarter. Then you can take along some seven cent sugar and ninety cent a half pint moonshine. Better buy your butter and eggs at home.

Forty-two human lives is the price Louisville has paid for the use of automobiles this year. Some folks, especially the friends and relatives of the dead, do not believe it was worth the price.

Perhaps the reason more women do not kill their husbands is that so many husbands are not worth killing.

It is claimed that prohibition jokes are barred now from the stage, but if they are I wonder what the comedian meant at the National the other night when he said, "More than a hundred years ago we waged a long war for our freedom, and now we have to go to Canada to enjoy it."

It is a melancholly reflection that two of the dearest old friends I used to meet every Christmas I can now meet no more. Poor old Tom and Jerry.

MARTHA OPHELIA WARD VICTIM OF PARALYSIS

Miss Martha Ophelia Ward, aged 61 years, 2 months and 2 days, died at her home in the Noereek community, early Thursday morning, November 30, as the result of a paralytic stroke suffered some two weeks previous. She was the eldest child of the late James W. and Mary Elizabeth Ward. She had been a consistent and devoted member of the No-creek, Wesley Chapel M. E. Church since the age of 12 or 13 years, and held in high esteem by her many friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the Church, Friday morning at 10:30, by the Rev. Granville Jaggers, her pastor. Burial followed

BEGGAR HAS FORTUNE

Frederick Hammil, a legless man arrested in New York for begging, was found to have five bank books, a $3000 sedan and a $20,000 ranch in North Dakota. When arrested he insisted on taking his captor and himself to court in a taxicab. Pointing to a motley crowd of offenders about to be pushed into the patrol wagon, Hammil shouted, "I won't go to court with these bums." Having lost his legs from infantile paralysis he travels about the country, cooking and sleeping in his sedan, which is fitted out with a bed and kitchenette.

HARDING WILL BE NOMINEE IN 1924, HOOVER PREDICTS

Palo Alto, Calif., Dec. 1.—The Republican Presidential candidate in 1924 "obviously will be Warren G. Harding," Secretary of Commerce Herbert C. Hoover said in an interview at his home here today.

"Moreover, by that time (1924)," Mr. Hoover said, "the public will be highly appreciative of the sanity and progressive character of the policies that will have brought this country through the reconstruction period."

Discussing national rehabilitation and reconstruction of the activities affected by the Worl War, Mr. Hoover said:

"The nation is catching up on its building programme. The improvement of credits is one cause and the action of the Department of Commerce in behalf of the builders in getting out a building code is another. In most communities the building code is gotten out for the benefit of the building material dealers. The Department of Commerce code is being generally adopted.

GIFT FROM YALE GRADUATES

Sun Dial That Belonged to the Founder of the University Presented to College.

The Elihu Yale sun dial, accepted by the corporation at its meeting in September, has been presented to the university by the following graduates, who have succeeded in purchasing this interesting memento of the founder of Yale: Ganson G. Depew, 1919; Clarence W. Bowen, '73; Henry K. Smith, '98, and E. Byrne Hackett, '14 Hon., and R. Eden Dickson, Esq., of Eden Lodge, Woodbridge, Suffolk, England.

The sundial, originally owned by Elihu Yale, has his coat of arms and the date 1708 on it. It is a lifesize figure of a West Indian negro, moulded in lead, standing in a half-kneeling position with arms upraised carrying the bronze dial. The dial has never been out of the possession of the descendants of Elihu Yale until purchased this summer by E. Byrne Hackett in co-operation with George E. MacLean of the American Universities union in Europe for the group of graduates who have just presented it to Yale.

This purchase is the culmination of efforts made during the last 15 years by Yale men. The final location of the dial on some suitable site is now being arranged for by Ganson G. Depew, representing the donors, and the consulting architect of the university, when approved by the corporation committee on architectural plan.—Yale Daily News.

PHOTOGRAPHER WAS IN LUCK

Despite Unlooked-For Action of Giant Baboon He Got Pictures of Rest of Group.

In an interesting article entitled "Five Thousand Miles on Foot in Central Africa" in the Wide World Magazine is an amusing account of the photographing of baboons gambling in the dried-up bed of a river.

"It was these river beds," writes the author, "that I usually sought, for one may be perfectly certain that in the dry season the thirsty animals will come thither to scratch for the last remaining drops of water. For the purpose of photographing this special group of baboons I had secreted myself in the branches of a withered uprooted tree. I had been there ten minutes, waiting for the animals, which were running about all over the place, to compose themselves into a picture, when just as I was on the point of releasing the shutter, I became aware of a rustling in the branches above me. The next moment a weight that seemed like a ton descended on my head.

"As it happened, the sudden shock caused me to operate the shutter, with the result that I got quite a good picture. Then, having hastily evacuated my position in the trees, I discovered that my head had been utilized as an 'observation platform' by the biggest baboon of the company and the fellow was now quizzically gazing at me from the branches."

United for Short Skirts.

Women in various parts of the country are forming "Short Skirt Clubs," the purpose of which is to thwart the edicts of fashion makers, who have voted for somewhat greater length. It seems a bit strange that women should have to organize for the right to wear skirts any length they please. There is no law against short skirts. But it would be as difficult for one woman to wear a short skirt when everybody else had shifted to the shoe-length as it would for an individual to adopt a daylight saving schedule in a town where the people had voted for standard time. The only way the average woman can resist changing fashions is to be conscious that she has a wide support among her fellow-women. If any man condemns these women as cowards, let him take off his coat in the theater. It is more comfortable and there is no law against it.—St. Louis Star.

Plan New Monorail Road.

Another experiment with overhead monorails is to be made, according to the Practical Engineer. The French ministry of public works has decided that an experimental line shall be installed in the Peronne district. The subject has been investigated by a commission, which issued a somewhat favorable report. If the experimental installation should prove successful it is proposed to provide a mono-railway between Paris and St. Germain. It is understood that the system is merely an aerial line carried on standards on which a car fitted with engine and propeller is mounted, and it is claimed that speeds up to 150 miles an hour can be reached.

Origin of "Anzac."

The name "Anzac" was first given publicity by the late Major Oliver Hogue, who was war correspondent for the Morning Herald of Sydney, New South Wales, Australia. He died in May, 1920. The name stands for the initial letters of Australia and New Zealand army corps, and was coined during the Dardanelles campaign in the World war. It is now popularly applied to Australians visiting Great Britain to take part in lawn tennis matches and other sports.

Long Trip to School.

Travel record for fourteen-year-old girls seems to be held by Helen Krangoff, Russian refugee. Since she hurriedly left Vladivostok, Siberia, she has traveled 12,000 miles and has not finished yet, for she recently left the United States for Bonn, Prussia, where she will study.

PECULIARITIES OF ANIMALS

(Gladys E. Brower)

The study of animals to those who love them is always a fascinating pastime, and it is interesting to discover that animals have their peculiarities the same as people. The ancients made use of this knowledge in performing many of their so-called miracles. In fact, they seemed to know more about animals than we moderns. We all know of the old adage about music having power to soothe the average beast, and can ourselves notice the different effects it has on animals. Eusebe Salverte, an old French writer, tells us how he saw a hippopotamus swim two miles down a river attracted by a band of martial music played by soldiers marching along the bank, and of an elephant rising delightedly upon his hind legs at some pleasing strains of music.

The nervous organism of dogs is particularly susceptible to harsh sounds, loud and piercing music actually causing them acute suffering. Hence their distress and howls at horn blowing or even a fife played in the same room with them.

The same author tells of a mastiff showing great agitation from guns shot off by soldiers in the street, where he lay until finally he hid himself. After a while his master missed him and went to find him. He found the dog had entered his house, gone upstairs and crawled under a bed, where he lay dead, with the blood gushing from his mouth and ears.

A stableman, who had been around horses all his life, told me he could quiet and go in the stall with a horse everyone had refused to go near, by the use of valerian; as soon as the horse smelled it he stood still and trembling and let the man do with him as he would.

The use of herbs played a fundamental part in some of the miracles the ancients performed with animals. Ancient history tells us how when Thebes had the lions loosed upon him in the arena, certain fair ladies scattered perfumed aromatics and oils made of spikenard and cassia around him as he stood surrounded by the hungry beasts, when to the wonder of the assembled crowd, the animals covered and cringed about him, allowing him to walk away unhurt. How incredible it seems that certain perfumes can turn ferocious animals into humble slaves.

I have noticed that dogs, unless it is forced upon them by steady use, hide and show great signs of distress at the smell of cologne.

They say the goats of Caucasus will follow anyone eagerly who entices them with the odor of cinnamon. We have all seen the effects of catnip on the house cat.

It has always been a marvel how, when the ancient Egyptians worshipped the ugly-looking crocodile, they made these reptiles harmless to them. Imagine a crocodile, adorned with gold earrings and bracelets, sitting on a velvet carpet, being fed with steaks, cakes and mulled wine. The real secret was that the animals were well fed, and there are countless cases among the ancients which will prove this theory. They maintained that a well-fed animal would lose all its ferocity and become amenable to kindness provided he were filled to repletion. As an animal's brutality seems to be one of nature's instincts to provide against starvation, this theory sounds reasonable. It only proves that nations older than we are, by treating animals more like human beings than machines, have been the ones to work with them charms that to us are looked upon as miracles.—Our Dumb Animals.

"DEXTER"

Olive Ellen Holbrook.

One day a cousin and his wife started to drive from their house to that of a friend, a distance of four miles. They owned three horses, but took "Dexter," who had saved their lives twice—once by stopping just in time to prevent crashing with an engine, and another time by running into the ditch to avoid an automobile going at a great speed.

After driving two miles, a storm came up. The lightning was terrific. My cousin's wife was very timid. My cousin saw an empty barn and drove into it. He had no more than done so before Dexter began to paw the ground and then to back. No coaxing or petting could make him stand still. At last he did a thing he had never done before—he kicked. My cousin got into the carriage, undecided what to do. But Dexter knew. He left the barn speedily, and ran to the top of a high hill. Then he acted as he always did—good natured and ready to do whatever his master wished him to do. Suddenly there came a flash of lightning and a terrific crash. My cousin looked around and saw that the empty barn had been struck by lightning and was burning furiously. From that day Dexter was given the nickname of "The Lifesaver."

"I'd like to go to a funeral this afternoon," said the office boy to the head clerk.

"Oh, you would, would you?" snapped the other. "Well, you can't. Just because the boss is away you think you can do as you like. You won't go."

"No, sir, I know I won't," sighed the boy. "But I'd like to, all the same."

Something tragic and appealing in the youthful voice led the head clerk to ask: "Whose funeral?"

"Yours, sir," said the boy.

"Mrs. Meeks paid you a very flattering compliment last night, my dear."

"What did she say?"

"She said that I did not look like a married man."—The New Bedford Standard.

POLE

Canada

Mounted Police Stationed 800 Miles Back Home—More Posts to Be Located in Far North.

Ottawa, Ont.—As the result of recent voyages of exploration in the North, Canada now claims the most northerly post office in the world—Craig Harbor, on Ellesmere Island, only 850 miles from the pole.

Another new post office in the northland is at Ponds Inlet, on Baffin Island. Both were established by the Canadian explorer, Captain Bernier, during the latest tour of his schooner the Arctic.

An inspector and six men of the Royal Canadian Mounted police are a Craig Harbor, where they have established a post, while four representatives of the famous police corps represent law and order at Ponds Inlet. Sergeant Joy of the "Mounties" has been in the district a year investigating an Eskimo murder.

The Bernier expedition was sent for the purpose of taking first steps in an extensive program calculated to maintain efficiently Canada's sovereignty in the vast northern empire, known to be rich in mineral deposits. The vessel carried materials for the construction of houses and provisions for the maintenance of posts.

According to a statement issued by the Canadian department of the interior, it is the intention of the government to establish additional posts year by year, and to continue scientific and exploratory work. A patrol ship will visit the new northern posts annually, taking in supplies and mail to the men left there. A representative of the air board accompanied the expedition and will report on the possibilities of aviation in the North, with particular reference to patrols, and exploratory and survey work.

PLDGS 500 MILES BACK HOME

Collie Sent Away Makes Long Trip to His Old "Family" and Wins Permanent Domicile.

East St. Louis, Ill.—A collie dog shipped from this city to Owen, Wis., has found its way back, a distance of 500 miles.

The pup was but six months old when sent by the owner, George Schaub, to John Welty of Wisconsin. It appeared to be content in its new home for a period of two months and then disappeared. Five weeks later it scratched at the door of the Schaub dwelling here, footsore, emaciated, and with toenails worn to the quick.

The Schaub family has agreed never to part with the wanderer again.

ALIENS BLAMED

FOR RADICALISM

G. W. Powell, director of the Americanization commission of the American Legion, declares that aliens who cannot speak English are responsible for most of the revolutionary ideas born in the United States. He points out that aliens usually form large colonies where they conduct all their affairs in their native tongue and make little effort to become Americanized. Stating that our country ranks 11th in literacy compared with northern European nations, Mr. Powell estimates that six per cent of our people are illiterate. The Legion intends to get as many illiterates as possible to attend night schools and to induce citizens to adopt others for educational purposes.

WARNS MEDICAL CULTS

Speaking before the Virginia Medical society at Norfolk, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, well known surgeon, of Rochester, Minn., declared that dabbling in surgery will bring the downfall of medical cults. "All these cults are clamoring to do surgery," said Dr. Mayo, "which is entirely dissimilar from their regular practices. When the homeopaths began surgery, homeopathy died. When these other cults take it up, their end will come just as surely." Urging medical men to take a larger part in civic life Dr. Mayo asserted that indifference of the more intelligent classes toward political affairs is a constant danger to the public welfare. He favors extending knowledge of medicine and good health through the public schools.

LADY GOT SO WEAK COULD SCARCELY STAND

After Suffering From Many Female Troubles This Lady Heard of Cardui and Took It, She Says, "Until I Was Well."

"SOME TIME AGO," says Mrs. Buena McFarland, of R. F. D. 2, Bostic, N. C., "I suffered a great deal with weakness common to women.

I had bearing-down pains, my sides and back hurt, and my limbs drew. I would get so weak in my knees I could scarcely stand.

"I was very nervous, and could not rest. I didn't feel like eating. I grew thin, and did not have ambition for anything.

"I had been trying other remedies . . . but did not get any better.

"Some one told us of Cardui, and what it was recommended for. I also took a Ladies Birthday Almanac and read of a case something like mine. I told my husband to get it and I would try it.

"I saw a great improvement after the first bottle (of Cardui), so I kept it up until I was well. Now I am the picture of health."

Thousands of other women have written, to tell of the beneficial results obtained by taking Cardui, and to recommend it to others.

Cardui has stood the test of extensive use, for more than forty years, in the treatment of troubles common to women. Try it.

STRAY STREAKS

(By Fluke McFike.)

On the spur of the moment—the undersigned, or rather the upper-signed, while out in the “wilds” last week end, in a combination fishing and hunting furor one day on the trip, was quietly, with stealth and premeditation in his heart, with fishing rods in the boat and gun in hands, letting the craft gently and noiselessly drift round a short bend in the rather narrow neck of a placid pool, suddenly spied what he took to be a muskrat, busily engaged in digging up something to eat in the waters edge. Up to face and boom went the old trusty 32-inch, choke-bore fouling piece. Something made a strange, rattling noise, a bit like plow gear, as the “varmit” leaped high in the air in his death struggle. Imagine our utter disgust, utter self-condemnation and disgrace when we approached the animal held fast by one front foot in a steel trap. The main reason for there being only one fore foot in the trap was due to the fact that the raccoon had only the one, having previously lost the other in investigation of a like implement at some time in the distant, hazy past. We hardly knew what to do, we had a horror of picking the thing up, as it was rather late in the forenoon and of course past time for the trapper to make his rounds and should he come up on us monkeying with the coon and trap we might have trouble in making him believe that we were not wholly without felonious intent. What should we do? We thought fast and decided on the chance—our heart being right—straightened the deceased coon out and swung him up in the forks of a bush, with the trap still on his foot. We then hurriedly pushed off some 50 yards, dismissed the incident from our mind and got busy fishing, when, in about 15 minutes we spied the trapper making his rounds and drawing his traps as he came. He stopped to talk with us in a good natured manner, although we noticed an interrogation mark at both ends of his sentences. We asked him if he had had much luck when he says “no. I am having a lot of trouble with my traps, some lowdownward guy or guys have been stealing them.” Gee, we were sure darn glad that we did not put that coon in our boat for safe keeping or that the trapper did not come upon us while handling his coonship. We asked the fellow if he had a trap on the sharp point below and he informed us that he did, or had had. Well, we says, you have a coon in that trap and its hanging up in a little bush, just out of the water, trap and all. He looked at us in a doubtful, mysterious and sort of sideways manner a few moments, then we told him what we had done and just how we came to do it, or rather how we happened to do it, as we did not come for that purpose. After a few minutes of apparent absorption of mind about the matter he took on a cherrier and more open mood. A fellow who would not steal his coon, but take steps to preserve it most assuredly would not steal his traps—and we immediately stood acquitted, we feel sure of a mental charge. He very kindly and rather insistently offered us the coon, which we, with real heartfelt thanks declined, for the reason that Louis had killed several rabbits of ancient origin and we felt that we had enough prehistoric meat on board our boat for the remainder of that trip.

Our good and new-found friend reset the traps he had just taken up, using the bait he had discarded in the woods near where he made his first discovery that traps were being stolen, and, we sincerely hope that his catch during the following night amply repaid him for all his pains and trouble in the two actions. We left on our homeward trip without again seeing our new acquaintance.

The good book says “By the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat thy bread” or words to that effect. We are not destructively criticising the one who penned the above quotation, but if he had gone a bit further and told us just how to get the meat to go with said bread we would have been much obliged to him.

Louis Fulkerson was down in the face last week, yes, he looked like a convicted criminal. He had a crick in his neck and could only look down. He thought he was better and went bird hunting about the middle of the week and most every bird flushed, not squarely in front of him and over three feet high was from 99 to 200 yards away before he could crank up and start shooting. He never failed to do his duty at meal time tho. He was always running
